“Techniques to Assessing Personality Traits in Management”

Program Overview
The ability to rapidly size up leadership talent is a crucial skill for professionals working with companies in a turnaround crisis. Identifying the “A” players and eliminating the bad apples are the goals of an assessment process, but that’s not always so easy to do. This interactive presentation will help audience members assess and develop their own interviewing skills. Management psychologists from RHR International, who specialize in assessing senior business executives, will share their expertise on how to make the most of a brief, focused interview process. The presentation will emphasize skills that make an assessment interview relevant, meaningful, and accurate. Common mistakes that can undermine an assessment will be described, along with tools to avoid them. Participants will learn ways to enhance their ability to really listen to and see what a client is telling them—on the surface and underneath.

Speakers
Anna Marie Buchmann, Ph.D. – Dr. Anna Marie Buchmann joined RHR International in 1998. She has consulted with numerous organizations on the assessment, development and coaching of executive talent.
Gail Golden, MBA, Ph.D. – Dr. Gail Golden joined the Chicago Office of RHR International in 2003. Her work focuses on leadership effectiveness at the senior executive level, building business driven teams in multinational organizations and enhancing organizational capabilities.
