Tim is a Partner at Southfield Capital. Southfield invests in privately held lower middle market companies. The firm focuses on growth oriented business-to-business services companies. Tim works on all aspects of Southfield's investment strategy but with an emphasis on operational execution including business diligence, post-close business planning, recruiting executives and implementing performance improvement initiatives. Prior to joining Southfield, Tim spent over 20 years working with lower middle market companies as an executive, consultant and investor.

Prior to joining Southfield, Tim was a Partner at Atlantic Street Capital, a lower middle market focused private equity fund. Before Atlantic Street, Tim was a Partner at CRG Group, a middle market turnaround and performance improvement consulting firm that was acquired by Deloitte in 2012. He spent over five years in operations management and business development roles at RHC Spacemaster, a middle market store fixture company, and began his career at The Keystone Group, a Chicago based management consulting firm. Tim is currently on the Boards of Ntiva, American Refrigeration Company and Milrose Consultants.

Tim received his M.B.A. from Northwestern University's J.L. Kellogg Graduate School of Management and his B.A. degree in Political Science from Yale University.
